Dokdo is an odd game that is quite fun if you can get into its slow and simple design. The main point of Dokdo is to explore the ocean and improve your ship. You do this by fishing, fighting, researching and conquering new islands. Fishing is the simplest task in the game because you park your boat off the island that you own and automatically catch the fish. To take over the island, you need to battle and sink the ships around it. There is a counter that appears at the top of the screen, indicating how many ships are guarding the island. Combat is simple too. Once you are in range of the enemy ship, you will automatically start firing as fast as your gun allows. You can upgrade your weapon in a friendly port if you find you lose a lot of battles. There are a few reasons why you want to take over the enemy island. First, it gives you another port to heal at. In addition, you can also then fish on this island, and can have lower prices on some items, such as wood or rocks. There are 28 different islands to access too, as well as some hidden sites late in the game. One thing that isn't great about Dokdo is the lack of direction it gives you. There are no real rules for the book or goal, with everything left until the player discovers. To aide with this lack of direction, there is a small Reddit community that explains a lot of game mechanics and concepts. In general, Dokdo is a decent resource management game where the mechanics of the game ended up being a big part of the experience. After all, I liked Dokdo because of its easy passing pace, its simple artistic style and drive you want to keep upgrading my craft. You can download Dokdo for free on both iOS and Android devices.
